

“As our noble, loving Master declared on one occasion, when asked to condemn a sinner: ‘Let him that is without sin among you cast the first stone.’ The person without frailties of his own might be to some extent excusable for assuming unbidden of the Lord the position of executioner of Justice—taking vengeance on wrongdoers, exposing them, etc.; but we find that our Master, who knew no sin, had so much Love in his heart that he was disposed rather to condone and forgive than to punish and expose and berate.”

‘He that is without sin—ἀναμάρτητος (anamartētos, G361), meaning the same kind of sin, adultery, fornication, etc. Kypke has largely proved that the verb ἁμαρτανειν (hamartanein, G264) is used in this sense by the best Greek writers.’

—Adam Clarke, Commentary on the Bible, on John 8:7

“He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.”
